CUPID'S TILLER.

at now the girl in the bow and the at the tiller of the Cupid were not speaking terms. For fully ten minutes the frigid silence had been broken by the splash of the boat's prow through the water and by the splash of waves on her cheeks.

and for fully ten minutes the wind been rising, with Cupid in full

"Why," the girl asked mentally, "can't he take a reef?"

"Why," the man wondered, "doesn't become frightened?"

He had shoved the tiller down and ran up into the wind. He would the Cupid about with a whiff of would at least transform the pretty in the face in the bow into an expression of amazement.

the little yacht, unaccounted to the strenuous handling, balked at the and, flapping her white sail fully for a minute, dipped over into edgy waters.

two "Oh!" sounded simultaneously the man and the girl felt the cold water close over them; then, as they shed up, the right arm of the man only encircled the girl's waist, while held the boat with the other. With a word he raised her to the side of overturned yacht and climbed up the girl laughed. "It's pretty wet," said, trying hard to keep her balance on the wave-rocked boat.

"Yes," plainly the man was red. For a minute he had cursed his recklessness but if she were only at, need he worry?

lapse of a minute ensued while he adjusted themselves to their un

"Aren't you sorry?" asked the girl, eyeing her bedraggled duck frock.

"Aren't you?" the man retorted. The planning had not cleared the atmosphere, remnants of the frigidly remained.

"For what?" the girl asked, innocently. The sun was beating down on her and restoring her wet curls to their natural glimmering golden hue.

"For this," indicating the position of the Cupid.

"I didn't do it."

"But you drove me to it," the man persisted.

"I hadn't said a word for hours when you deliberately ran into the wind and upset us," she declared emphatically.

They were drifting to shore, but not to their own side of the sound. Neither of them noticed where their boat was heading.

"I didn't think she'd go over, but I'm glad now that she did." The man's face had taken on an expression of determination.

"Oh!" with utter astonishment. "And I might have been drowned."

"Not while I was with you," the man assured her.

"After a minute the girl looked at him. 'How are we to get home?' she asked. 'I have an engagement this evening.' 'I am aware of that,' the man returned. 'And with me.' 'I believe I explained to you before—before the boat went over, that I was not going with you to that dance.' The girl's hair was blowing about her face, and her cheeks were bright with the fresh sunburn. The man had never seen her so pretty. Few girls are at their best on the side of an overturned boat far out in the sound.

"And an explanation to you now that until you promise to go with me instead of that Thompson fellow to-night you will not go at all." His tone was firm.

He wave nearly threw them off their balance, and the sail flapped back and forth joyously in the water. The Cupid was laughing. Every time a wave jolted the two perched on her side they grasped the edge of the boat and unconsciously drew closer together.

The man went on. "It is a mean advantage, but think, haven't you played with me long enough? Aren't you going to tell me what I've wanted to know so long? The answer, closer to her, and in so doing rocked the boat dangerously.

"No," the girl answered between breaths.

"Then we'll stay here. We will remain on this overturned boat until you promise to marry me—and soon, too."

"But if I don't love you?" argued the girl, avoiding his eyes confidently.

"You do, though," he said, confidently. The girl elevated her eyebrows. Things had taken a new turn.

"I'll drown if—if we stay here much longer," she said, after a minute, trying to assume a pleading tone.

The man drew still nearer, almost close. "Don't you love me, dear?" he asked.

"You—you know," she said, grabbing the side of the boat as a big wave swept them several feet on its crest.

The man put his arm slowly, firmly, about her waist. "And you will marry me?"

He heard only the flapping of the Cupid's sail in the water. The girl did not answer.

"Won't you?" he repeated.

The girl slowly from his embrace, looking him full in the eyes. Her feet touched the water.

"Yes," she cried, and struck out among the waves with a stroke even the man might have envied her—had he not been too astonished.

"And—Jack—?" she called between waves. "You—see—I—I did not have to say 'yes.' I can swim."

The man righted the Cupid, but when the girl again, wet but still pretty, sat beside him at the tiller he noticed where they had drifted.

"Your engagement?" he cried.

"Oh, and see where you are!" she said; but there was no regret in her tone.

"Yes, see where you are," the man repeated, encircling her with his arms. And, you're going to remain here always."

The Cupid slapped her sails knowingly, and, manned by a happier crew, crossed the sound.

WHY HOT WEATHER MAKES WOMEN NERVOUS

A Well Known Canadian Lady Sends Letter of Endorsement to Peruna.

Miss Mary Burns, 23 Spring Garden Road, Halifax, N. S., writes: "Having used Peruna for indigestion and stomach trouble and to build up a broken down system with the very best results, I am pleased to state my experience with this excellent medicine. I had been troubled with stomach trouble and poor digestion for some years, and although I tried many remedies and dieting, nothing seemed to restore my health until I used Peruna. In three months I had entirely recovered my health and strength."—Mary Burns.

SUGGESTIONS BY DR. HARTMAN.
—HOW TO COMBAT THE NERVOUS DEPRESSION INCIDENT TO WARM WEATHER.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anemic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoir for nerve vitality. These centers become bloodless for the want of proper nutrition.

This condition is especially noticeable during the warm season. Every summer an army of invalids are produced as a direct result of weak nervous systems.

This could easily be overcome by the use of Peruna. Peruna strikes at the root of the trouble by correcting the digestion. Perfect digestion furnishes increased nutrition for the nerve centers. Perfectly digested food gives them reservoirs of life a vitality which creates strong, steady nerves, and in this manner fortifies and nourishes life. Miss Blanche Grey, a prominent young society woman of Memphis, Tenn., in a recent letter from 174 Alabama street, writes: "To a society woman whose nervous force is often taxed to the utmost from lack of rest and irregular meals."

I know of nothing which is of so much benefit as Peruna.

I took it a few months ago when I felt my strength giving way, and it soon made itself manifest in giving me the new strength and health."—Miss Blanche Grey.

Peruna Contains no Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect. It is a permanent cure for the system.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drug of a narcotic nature.

At this season of the year we are peculiarly liable to inflammations of the stomach and bowels. It is the part of wisdom to learn how to cut them off in the earliest and quickest manner. Peruna does this by its peculiar power over all forms of catarrhal troubles.

CLIMBS THE ROYAL ARCH NEAR BOULDER

Salt Lake Woman the First of Her Sex to Accomplish This Feat.

Miss Burkella Pierce, who is at the head of the physical culture department of the Pierpont School of Oratory of this city, and at present in charge of the same work at the Colorado Chautauqua, has just climbed the Royal Arch near Boulder, Colo., a feat never before accomplished by a woman. The Denver Post of Sunday has a large picture of the arch and the story of Miss Pierce's ascent. The story, which follows, says that Miss Pierce is from Dallas, Tex., but this is an error.

"Miss Burkella Pierce of Dallas, Tex., and head of the department of physical culture at the Colorado Chautauqua here, has just accomplished a feat which no other woman has ever been able to perform. Yesterday, in company with three tourists and a guide, she climbed Mount Green, one of the highest and most difficult mountains to ascend in the vicinity of Boulder, to what is known as the Royal Arch. Here two of the party turned back, while Miss Pierce continued her attempt to climb to the top of the natural arch.

"After spending five or six hours in the hardest kind of climbing up an almost perpendicular side of rock, Miss Pierce and her companion, Frank Aydelotte of Louisville, Ky., reached the arch and stood on the dome of this big arch. The arch stands between the well-known Flat-tops and Green mountains, and is an exceedingly hard climb even for a strong man.

"To make this ascent one must climb on his hands and knees up the smooth sides of the rocks, which are in two parts, jutting at the top and forming an arch. The arch stands on one of the highest points on Green mountain. The opening in between the two rocks which meet in this apex is itself 12 feet high and at the widest point is about sixty feet broad. It is probably more difficult and dangerous to come down than to get up, on account of the sheer position of the rocks.

"The other competing party besides Miss Pierce and Prof. Aydelotte, were Miss Anna Anderson of Dallas, Tex., and Miss F. A. Parrish of the same place.
